A MINUTE LATER...

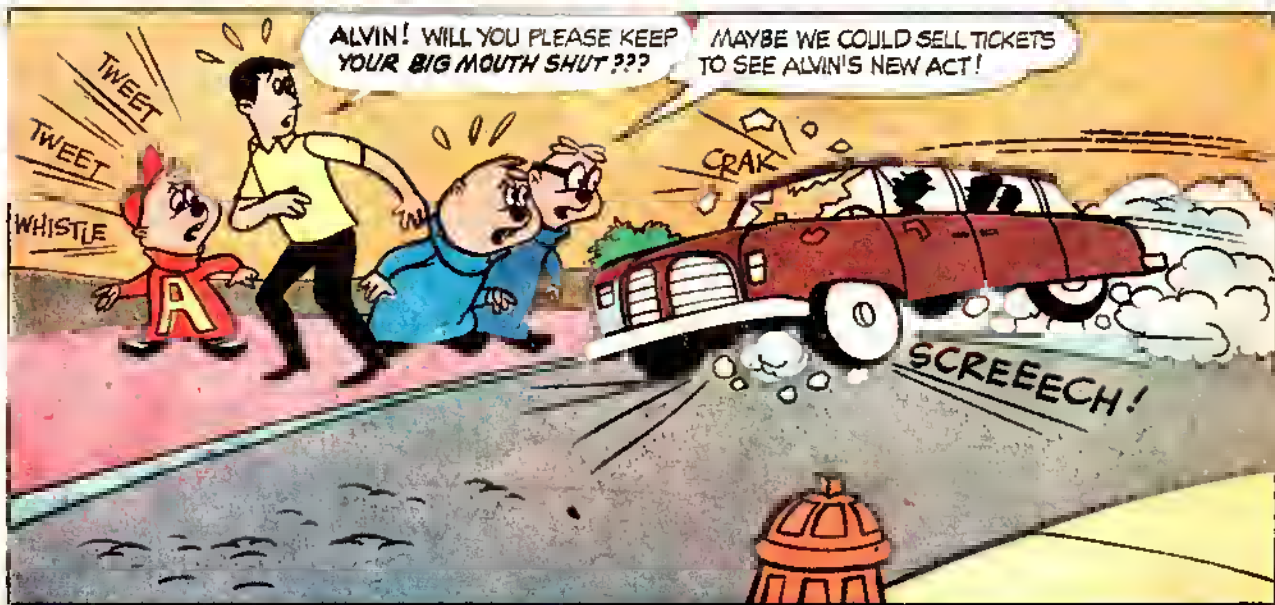

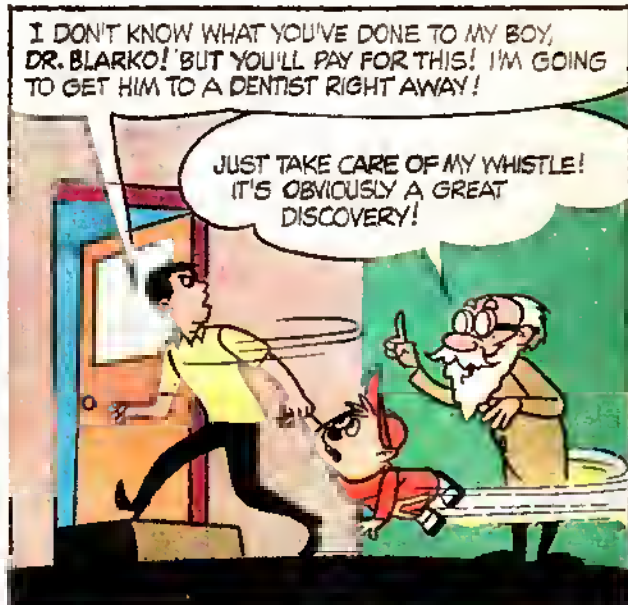

WHAT'S GOING ON IN HERE?

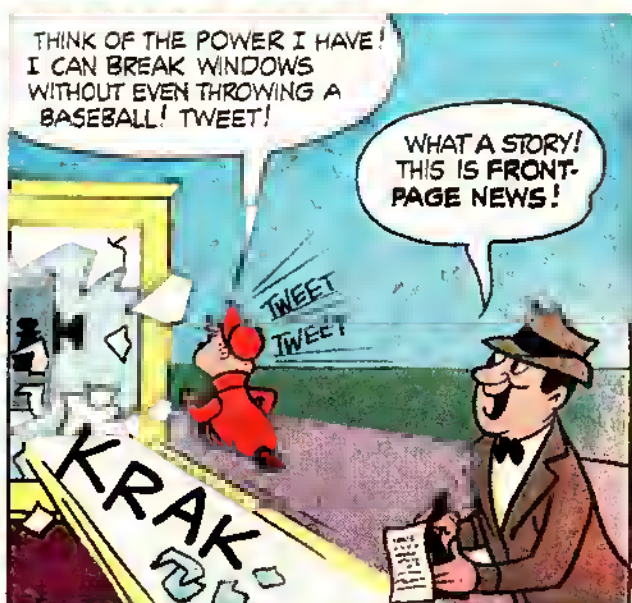

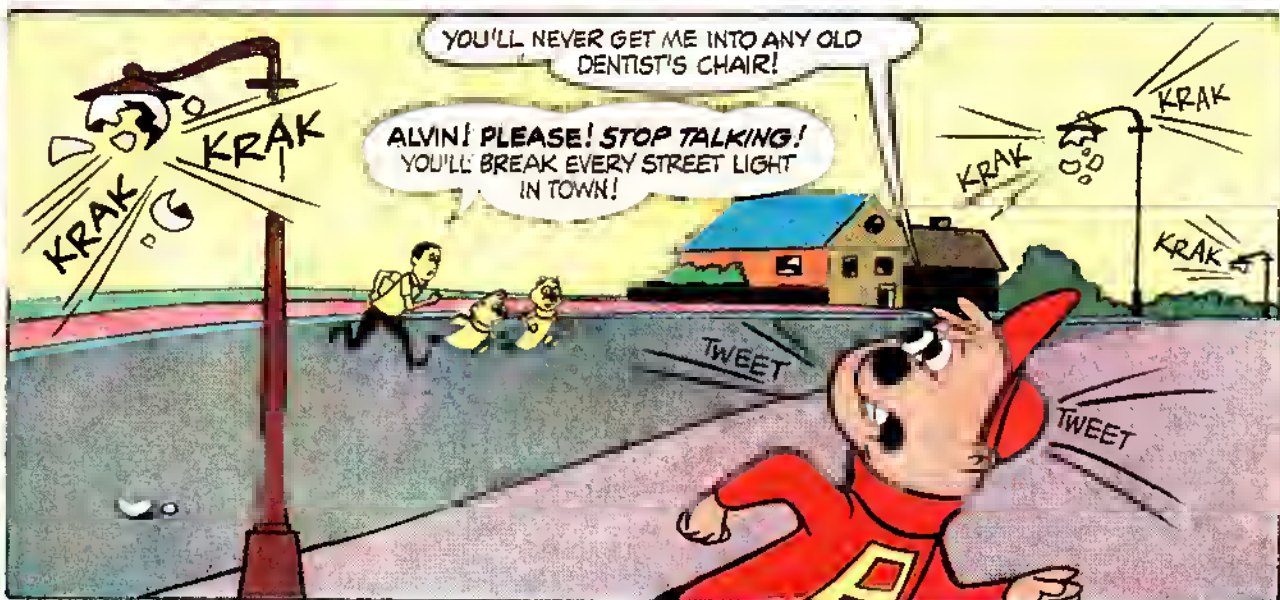

HOW DO YOU DO, MR. SEVILLE! I'M AFRAID WE HAVE A LITTLE PROBLEM WITH ALVIN!

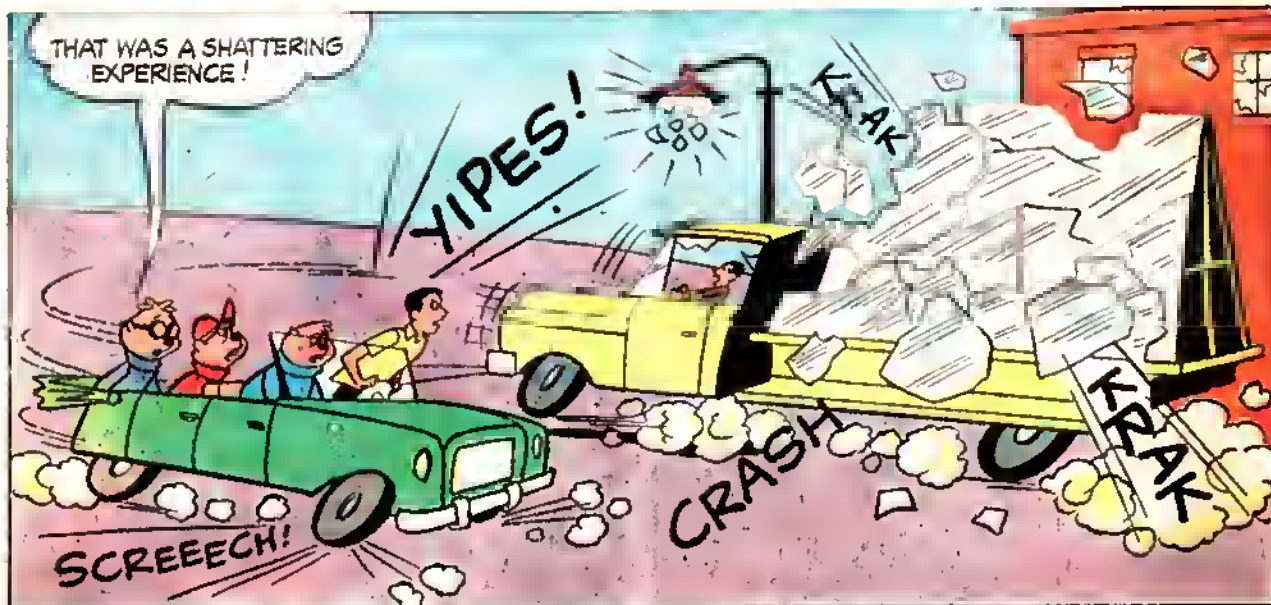

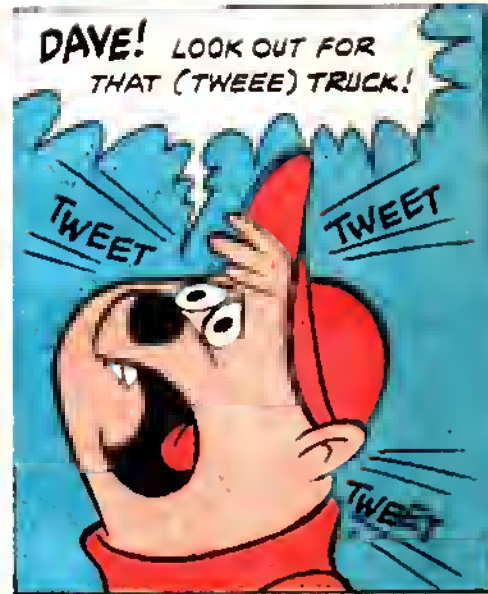

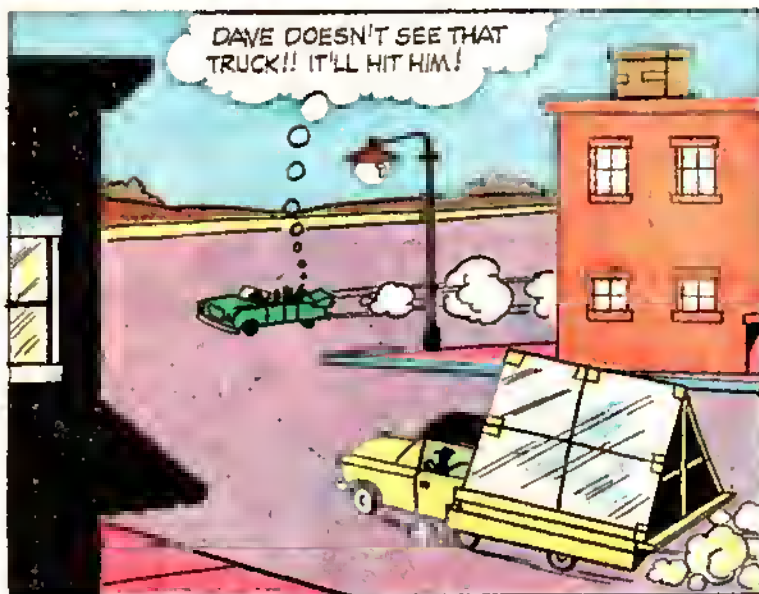

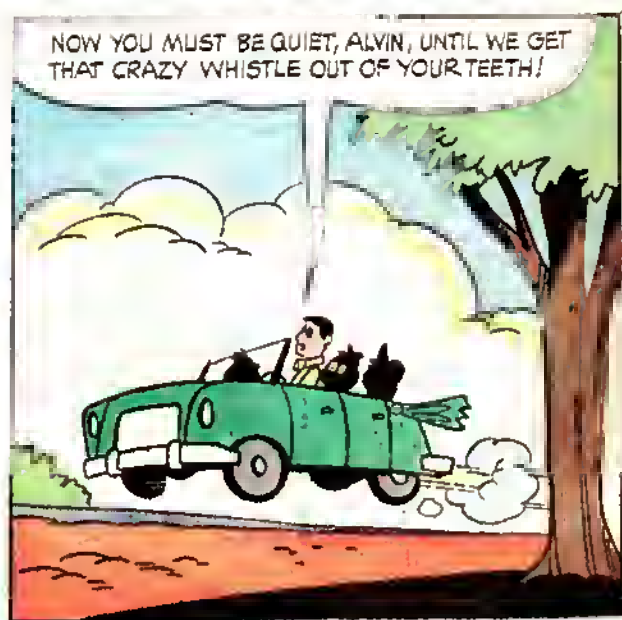

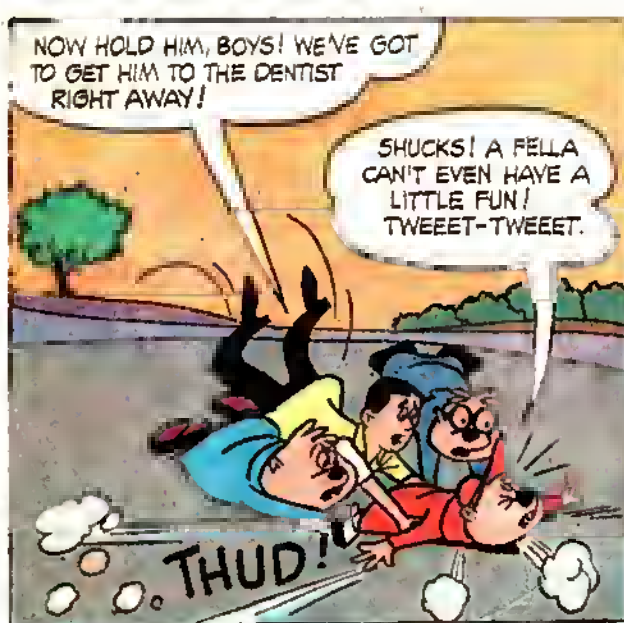

...AND UNTIL WE REMOVE THE WHISTLE, I'M AFRAID ALVIN WILL DO A LOT OF DAMAGE---UNLESS HE KEEPS HIS MOUTH SHUT!

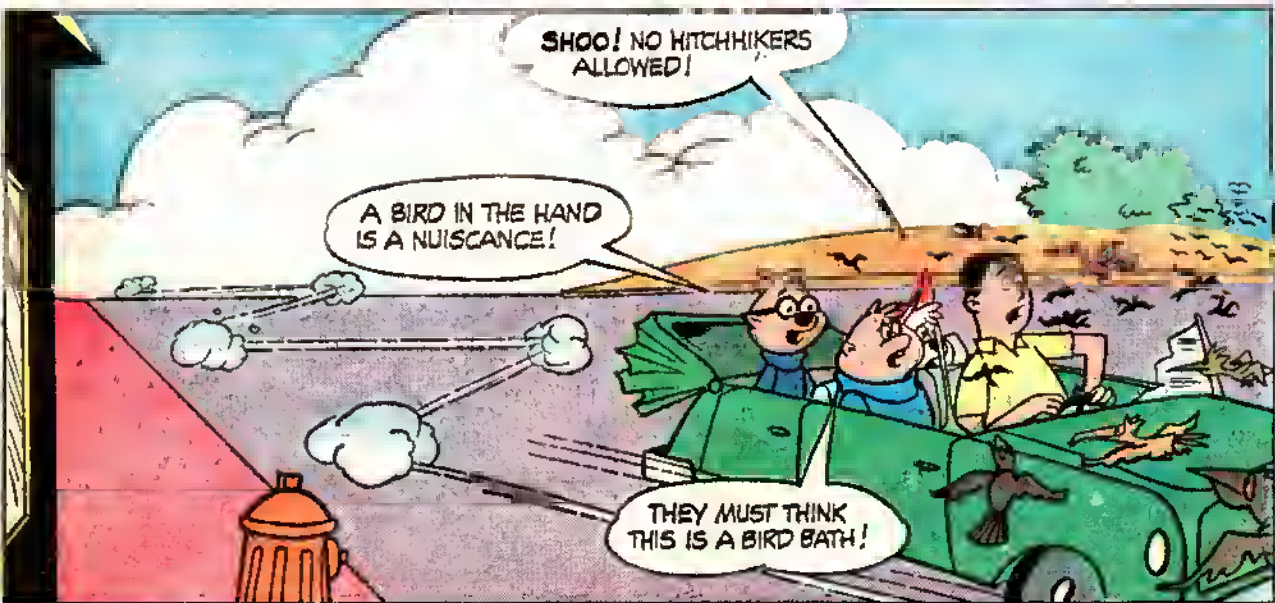

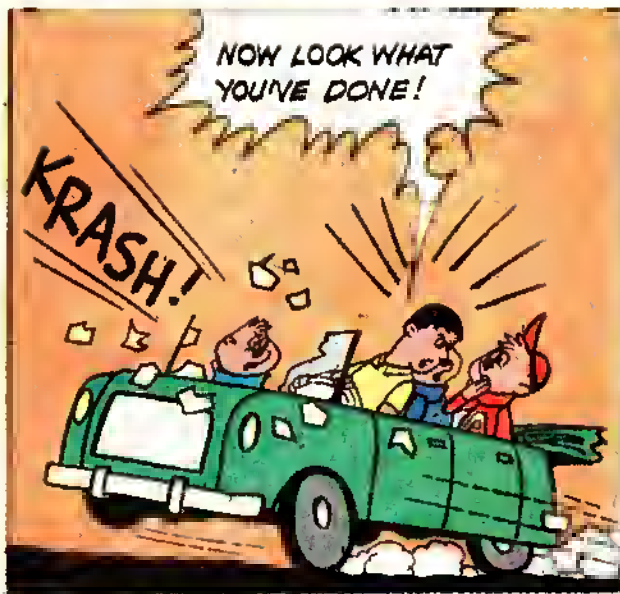

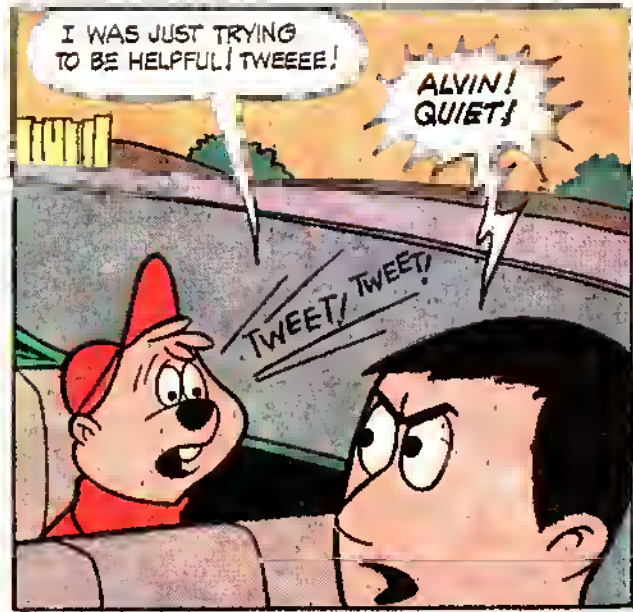

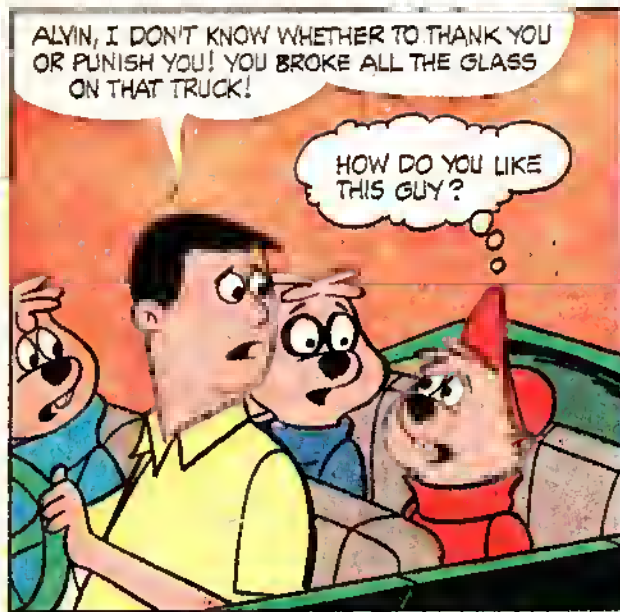

DO YOU REALLY EXPECT ME TO BELIEVE THAT?

I THINK THAT'S VERY INTERESTING!

WHENEVER ALVIN TALKS, THE VIBRATIONS ON THE WHISTLE SHATTER EVEN THE THICKEST GLASS INSTANTLY!

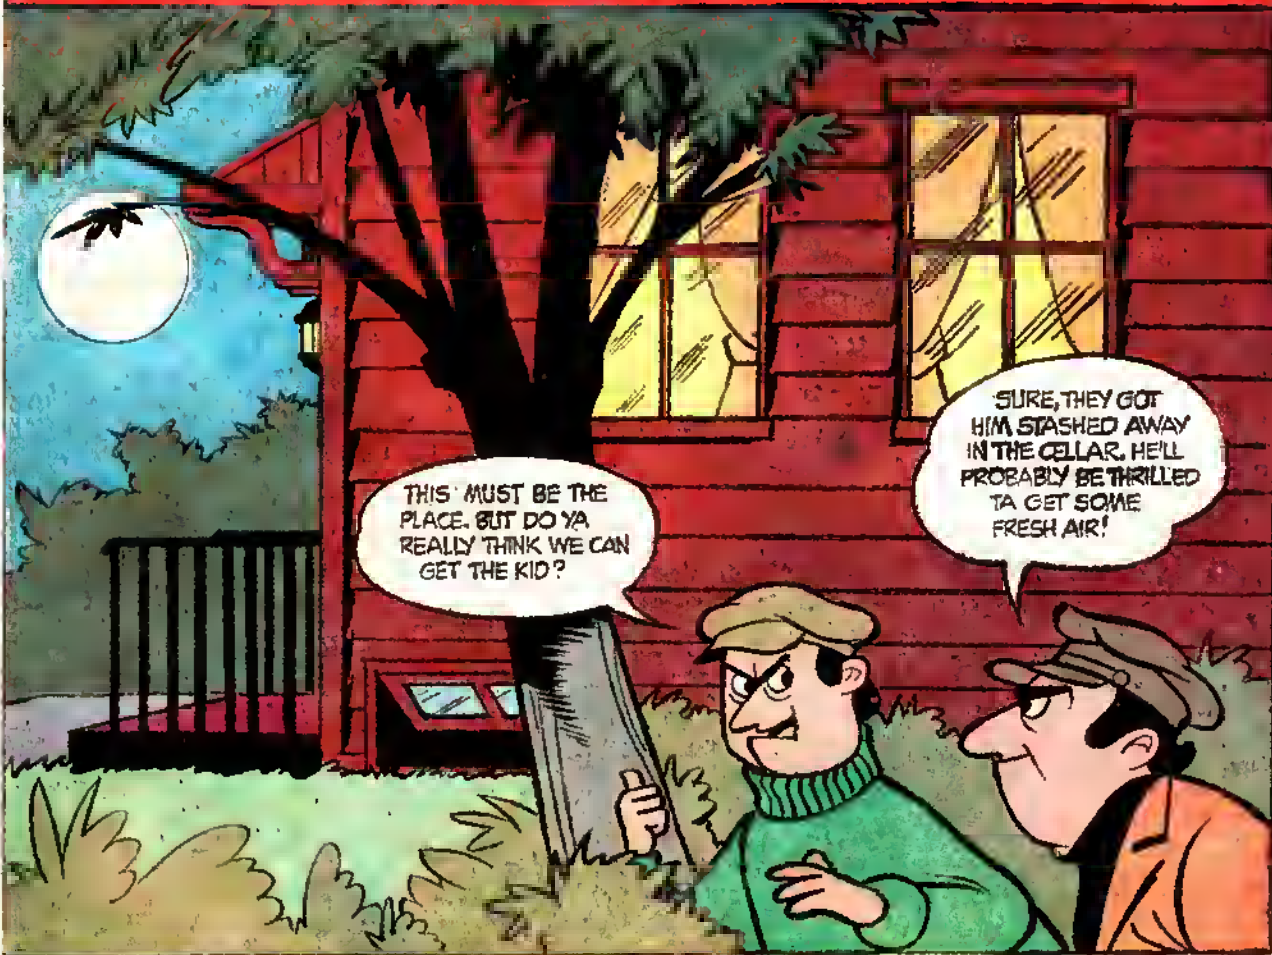

WITH THAT WHISTLE IN HIS MOUTH, ALVIN COULD PROBABLY SMASH THE GLASS DOORS OF THE BANK WITH NO TROUBLE!

GOOD THINKING, ARCHIE. BUT THEY GOT HIM LOCKED UP IN HIS HOUSE, WAITIN' FOR THE DENTIST.

THEN WE GO AN' BORROW HIM FOR A LITTLE WHILE! RIGHT OUT FROM UNDER THE NOSES OF HIS BROTHERS AND THAT GUY SEVILLE!

ALVIN

HEADING FOR A CRACK-UP

THIS MUST BE THE PLACE. BUT DO YA REALLY THINK WE CAN GET THE KID?

THIS BOY IS NOT TO BE BELIEVED!

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT DUCK?

Ted liked living in the big city, but it did give him some problems. For example, he wanted a pet very badly, but his father said no. One day they would be moving to the country, and that would be different. But, while they lived in an apartment, his dad did not think it was a good idea to have a dog or a cat living with them.

Ted got his brilliant idea one day while he was in the big city park. He had often gone there to look at the ducks floating in the big pond, but the idea had only come to him a few days before. His father had never said anything about having a duck for a pet. He had said no to cats and dogs and such, but Ted had never brought up the question of a duck. So, in order to avoid any big complications, Ted decided he wouldn't even tell his dad until it was time to bring the duck home.

He had had his eye on one special duck. A small brown and white one that always swam at the far end of the pond. But since Ted couldn't get to that end of the water, he would just have to wait until the duck came to him.

One evening when the park was just about empty, he put his plan into action. He waited until there was no one but himself at the pond. Then he started to break up pieces of bread and throw them onto the water in the hope of luring his favorite duck to him. Unfortunately, it seemed that every duck but the right one came to him. After almost an hour of this, Ted lost all hope and decided to forget the whole thing. Then the strangest thing happened.

As he started to walk away from the pond, the brown and white duck paddled over to the shore and began to walk toward Ted. At first, the boy did not even notice this turn of events. But then he got the feeling that he was being followed. When he turned around, there was the duck, only a few feet behind him.

Ted tried not to get excited, but it wasn't easy. He slowly managed to fall back to a point where he and the duck were almost side by side. Then he reached down and picked up the fluffy creature. The duck didn't make a sound. Nor did it struggle even the slightest bit...

Ted hurried home because he wanted to have his new pet all set up in its quarters before his dad got home from the office. Then perhaps, his father wouldn't argue too much about keeping the duck, since he would already have settled down with them.

Naturally, Ted's dad was surprised when he walked into the apartment. There he found his son sitting in the big easy chair with a brown and white duck on his lap. At first, Ted's father didn't quite know what to make of it. Was this some kind of joke? But when Ted explained that he was very serious about keeping the duck as a pet, the father knew he had a problem on his hands.

First of all, the duck belonged to the city since he lived in the municipal pond. And, by taking the duck without permission, Ted was actually stealing. His father really didn't have to go any further, because Ted was an honest boy, and he wouldn't steal anything from anyone. He quickly—and sadly—decided to take the duck back to the pond right away. He really hadn't thought he would be stealing—and then again perhaps deep down inside he did know it was wrong. Why else would he have waited until everyone else had gone home from the park? But at the moment, it only seemed that he was going to give the duck a little better home than it already had.

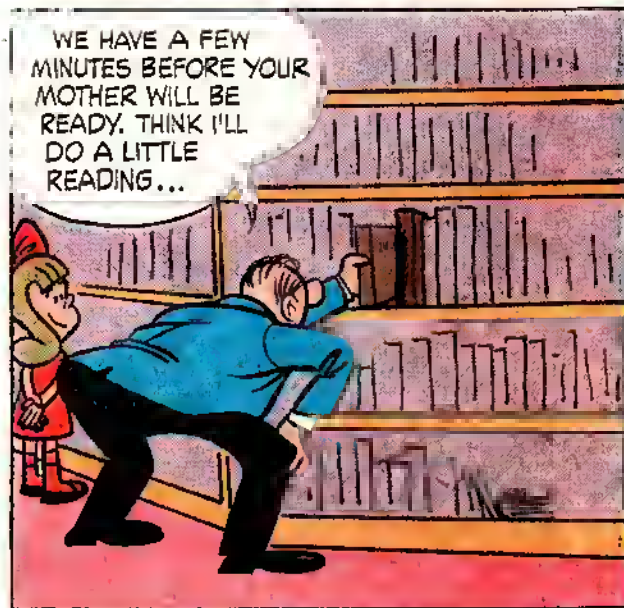

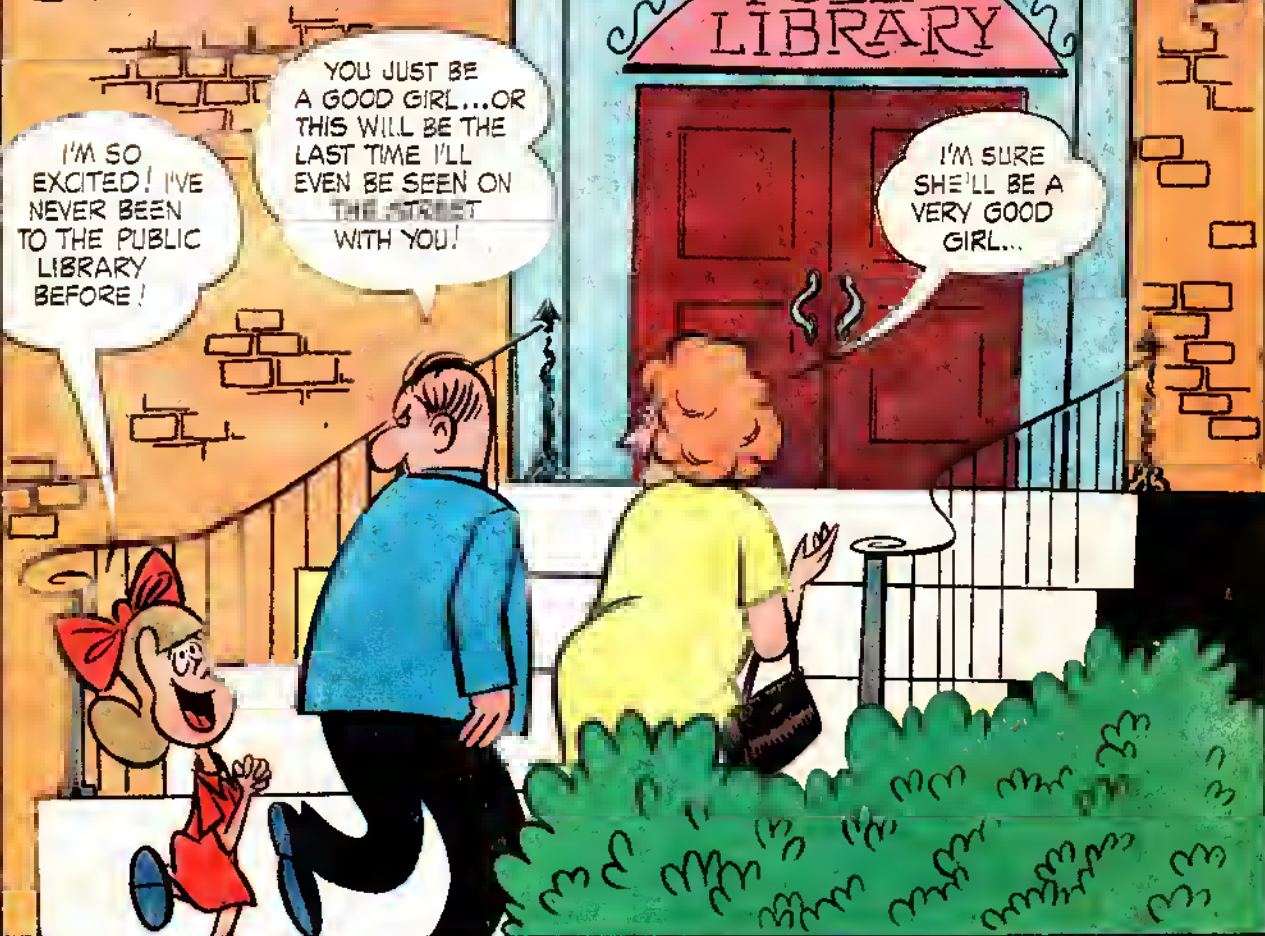

He took the duck back to the pond right away. But from that day on, Ted visited him regularly—just to make sure the city was taking good care of his pet. And the duck did seem to act as though Ted really was his master...
